Students learn in many ways, like seeing, hearing, and experiencing things firsthand. But for most students, one of these methods stands out. Why is this important? Research has shown that students can perform better on tests if they change their study habits to fit their own personal learning styles. In this class we'll experiment with different activities to help you discover your best learning style. We'll practice using practical (and fun) activities to help you enhance your study time. You'll learn techniques to make the most of your strengths and compensate for your weaker areas. Yes, you'll be listening, reading, writing, even taking practice tests . . . but we promise, you'll have fun too. You'll also be acting, vocalizing, singing, smelling, and moving while you learn! Find out what works best for you—then practice and play to make the most of it.
